Aged President of Czechoslovakia Says Europe Not To Be Forced into New War.

HITLER DISCUSSED

Masaryk Cites Germany's Previous Failure to Form Pan-Germany.

EDITOR'S NOTE—The George Washington of his country—the 84-year-old president of Czechoslovakia, Thomas G. Masaryk—does not believe that war is coming in Europe. H. R. Knickerbocker gives President Masaryk's views in his series "Will War Come?"

PRAGUE, Feb. 20.—"They tried it and lost."

The eighty-four year old president of Czechoslovakia, Thomas G. Masaryk, let a sardonic chuckle punctuate his final words on the chances that Germany would again make war to realize her Pan-German aims.

"They lost," he repeated. "That ought to be sufficient."

The president's state is uniquely his state. He actually created it. The aged philosopher-statesman is the Washington of Czechoslovakia, literally the father of his country. Today his nation, his child, feels that it has more to fear from the Pan-Germanism of Hitler than any other state.

For they read in Hitler's "My Battle," that "Today we Germans number eighty millions in Europe," and that the sixty-five millions in Germany must be united with the others, and that within "scarcely a hundred years 250,000,000 Germans will live on this continent, and not jammed together like cooties."

SECESSION DEMANDED

Then they look at the population of Czechoslovakia, scarcely fourteen million, and of them the million Germans. Already the German part of Czechoslovakia has demanded secession and union with Germany so vociferously that the Nazi party was dissolved by edict.

But the Czechs look again at the map. Their 54,000 square miles are stretched out in such an unhappy fashion that, motorized German and Hungarian troops within four hours could join in the middle of Czechoslovakia and divide the nation in two. The Czechs claim they have only 119,000 Hungarian minority citizens but Hungary claims there are more than a million, and the Hungarians are if anything more eager than the Germans for "territorial revision."

NATION CUT OFF

If Austria went Nazi, Czechoslovakia would be almost completely encircled by enemies, and worst of all, would be cut off from any near access to Jugoslavia, the only member of the little entente whose army is strong enough to do her ally any good.

It is a black prospect for this youthful state in the sixteenth year of its life. President Masaryk sees all the shadows. But he also sees lights.

Five drawing rooms precede the reception room of the president in the magnificent old castle of Prague. In the year before Masaryk was born the cannons of the castle bombarded the city of Prague to crush a revolt of Czech patriots against the Hapsburgs. Today the white-haired master of the castle has no air of triumph about him. He looks the part of a philosopher contemplating the prospects of war from the height of eighty-four years.

"Don't forget," he exclaimed, speaking slowly, correct English. "That Hitler's Government is only one year old. One cannot tell how it will develop. It took the good Lord six days to create heaven and earth. He was omnipotent. He could have done it in a second. But he needed six days to do it in and when he finished he was tired and had to take a rest on the seventh day."

"How can you expect Hitler to do better," he smiled. "Germany with its sixty-five million people is the biggest nation in Europe next to Russia. To reorganize it in the thorough-going way Hitler is attempting is a gigantic task and it cannot be done overnight. It cannot be done in a year. And when it is done it may look quite different. Those sixty-five million people have brains. We will just wait and see how their brains work. The Germans are essentially a people of thinkers. They couldn't live without thinking and that will have results."

That was one of the optimistic notes.

BEFORE HITLER

"But Hitler," he continued, "is only a continuation of a movement that began away back in the last century when the Pan-Germans first arose in Austria. His program, to unite all the German speaking peoples of Europe into one vast German empire, is one of the oldest conceptions of modern politics. You Americans know so little about the historical background. Friends of mine from America come here to me and talk about Hitler and show such apprehension. But I have watched this thing developing too many decades to be alarmed."

Storm Over Mountains Halts All Service

By International News Service.

GREENVILLE, S. C., Feb. 20.—The first army air mail flight from Atlanta to Richmond, ended in a crackup here today when Lieut. E. T. Gorman overshot the landing field as he descended in a blinding storm.

The plane was badly damaged, but, Lieut. Gorman escaped without injury.

Gorman circled the landing field five times in the storm trying to locate the boundaries of the field and the wind direction. He finally brought the ship down but overshot the field and his plane struck a hedge and nosed over.

Hampered by one of the most severe snow storms in years in the eastern section of the country, storms, rains and poor visibility in the far west and biting cold weather in the middle west, the army air service today grudgingly went about its task of assuming responsibility for the transportation of the air mail.

At an early hour today, commanding officers at the eastern zone base of the air corps at Floyd Bennett field, New York, estimated that service would be maintained over less than one-third of the regularly constituted air mail routes.

WHITE HOUSE IN AIR CASE?

Black Committee Makes Effort To Show Hoover Has Interest In Deals.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—An effort to show that the White House, under Herbert Hoover, took a direct interest in the award of air mail contracts was made today by Senator Black (D) of Alabama, in cross examination of former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown.

"Did you know that the bid of the United Aviation company on the middle transcontinental route was sent to the attorney general in 24 hours at the order of the White House?" Black asked.

"I don't know anything about that," said Brown. "I was in Halifax at the time."

The telegram, delivered to Brown while the latter was on the witness stand before the Black committee, contained only four words—"be of good cheer."

Brown declared, "I am disturbed that it was given out. I did not authorize its release."

During the series on "Will War Come?" the Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round, read each day by many Circleville and Pickaway residents, will appear on an inside page of The Herald.

E. L. HOFFMAN IS CANDIDATE

S. Court-St Man Circulating Petition For Treasurer's Nomination.

Earl L. Hoffman, S. Court-St. announced Tuesday that he had put his petition into circulation for the Democratic nomination for county treasurer.

Mr. Hoffman seeks a third term. In announcing his candidacy, Mr. Hoffman said the County Home Rule amendment passed at the last election by Ohio voters repealed Section 10 of the Ohio constitution which ruled that no person could serve as treasurer more than four out of six years. This meant that no one could serve three terms consecutively.

Since this amendment has been voted a number of county officials, over Ohio, including sheriffs, because it includes them too, have announced themselves for a third two-year term.

The treasurer, sheriff, recorder, prosecutor, and clerk of courts' terms are for only two years each while probate judge, auditor, commissioner, and supervisor are each for four years, and common pleas judge is for six years.

COLUMBUS AGAIN REQUESTS WHITE TO FIRE HOPPLE

COLUMBUS, Feb. 20.—A new drive aimed to force the removal of E. J. Hopple as chairman of the Ohio Public Utilities commission was opened here today by the Columbus City council.

Undeterred by the recent refusal of Governor George H. Duffel to oust the utility chairman, the city council yesterday passed a resolution requesting its stand against Hopple and charging him with having "lost the public confidence as an impartial arbitrator in public utility matters."

The resolution, which called upon the governor for a second time to remove Hopple, was expected to be circulated among other cities in the state with a request for their cooperation in a new drive to oust the utility commissioner.

drifting close to shore and facing imminent destruction.

The patrol boat Dix from the east Boston consular station, was rushed to the scene and attempted to throw a line aboard and tow the steamer to safety.

Due to the precarious position of the Northern Sward, larger coastguard vessels could not approach her. The 125-foot patrol-boat Dix, with a hastily made-up crew of coastguardsmen fought against tremendous odds, herself was in constant danger of breaking up on the jutting ledges.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20.—The lumber schooner, Horace X. Baxter, 600 miles northeast of Honolulu, sent a message for aid today, reporting she was leaking and disabled and in the path of a brewing storm.

Coast guard authorities here reported the cutter Itasca was enroute from Honolulu to the disabled vessel.

The Horace X. Baxter is under the command of Captain John Mattson and has a crew of 28 men.

50 FEARED LOST

TOKYO, Feb. 20.—Fifty seamen are feared to have lost their lives as a result of the foundering of the Japanese steamer Banyai off the shores of Honan, Korea, yesterday, it was announced today.

The Banyai sent out S. O. S. signals for minutes, stating the ship was in danger of sinking. Then the messages ceased.

Steamers rushed to aid the stricken vessel arrived at the scene indicated today, but found no trace of her.

Aimee's Daughter Files for Divorce

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 20.—Robert Aimee's daughter, daughter of Mrs. Aimee McPherson-Hutton, Aimee's daughter, today had on file a suit to divorce William Bradley Smythe, captain of a steamship company in Seattle, Wash.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Department stores sales in the metropolitan area of New York rose 1.5 per cent in the twelve shopping days from Feb. 1 to 12 as compared with the corresponding period of last year, the Federal Reserve bank of New York had reported today. Exclusive of liquor sales, however, the gain amounted to only 1.1 per cent.

LIMA, Feb. 20.—A plea of not guilty was entered here today by Earl R. Leach, editor, and the Lima News Publishing Co., to charges of criminal libel filed by City Solicitor Charles W. Long, counsel for one of the Dillinger gangsters now facing trial for murder in connection with the slaying of Sheriff Jess Sawyer.

The charges were contained in affidavits which cited in an article February 14 which declared that Long, city solicitor, should not serve as defense counsel for Harry Pierpont.

TEMPERATURE THREE BELOW

Warmer Weather Predicted; Six Known Dead in Chicago From Cold.

Circleville's temperature fell to three below zero Tuesday morning, Dr. H. R. Clark's thermometer showed.

The coldest hour was believed to be shortly after midnight.

Fears of a protracted cold spell were dispelled by weather observers who predicted a steady rise in temperatures, beginning this afternoon.

At 8 a. m. official thermometer readings were zero at Columbus and Cleveland, and four degrees above at Cincinnati. Northern Ohio was hard hit by the frigid temperatures. Norwalk thermometers registering 21 below and Bowling Green 17 below.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Six persons were dead here in the wake of the sudden, cold wave that was sliding eastward today after dropping temperatures to an official minimum reading of eight degrees above zero.

All six victims died from cold and exposure.

Today the mercury was steadily rising to the freezing mark.

Extra crews of workers were completing the job of removing four inches of snow from streets, boulevards and railroad right of ways.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—New York awoke this morning to find itself literally snowbound as a blizzard of unparalleled intensity swept through the canyons between its tall buildings.

All forms of transportation except the subway suffered one of the worst tie-ups since the legendary blizzard of '88.

It was impossible for thousands of New Yorkers living in the boroughs outside of Manhattan to come to work.

Many more suburbanites were snowbound. Trains were running, although far behind schedules, and many could not get to the stations.

ARMY STARTS LAKE-TO-OHIO CANAL SURVEY

Public Hearings Planned in Dayton, Youngstown, and Columbus

STUDY 3 ROUTES

Major Styer in Charge of Scioto River Survey

COLUMBUS, Feb. 20.—Two representatives of the district U. S. army engineers headquarters at Pittsburgh were in Ohio today assimilating evidence in support of three Ohio routes suggested for a proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River canal.

Their task is to contact and interview civic, business and industrial proponents of the routes preliminary to public hearings that will be held at Dayton, Columbus and Youngstown early next month.

Acting under Major W. D. Styer, district chief engineer in charge of the special report on the canal survey, George Kershaw, assistant engineer, and William Sheppard, Jr., associated engineer, left Pittsburgh for an extended 10-day survey of the Ohio fields.

SEEKS INFORMATION

"We wish to have all the evidence of an economic nature that can be offered to justify each of the proposed routes in Ohio as well as the Allegheny River-French creek route in Pennsylvania," Major Styer explained. "Naturally, we must call upon the interested business, civic and industrial organizations and individuals for this information." He added:

"Because this is a report on previous surveys made by Colonel Kutz in 1925, our data on the economic possibilities of each route must be brought up to date. We are anxious to hear from all interested parties. The engineering data, of course, we will dig out ourselves."

Public hearings have been set tentatively for March 8 and 9 at Dayton, Columbus and Youngstown in Ohio, and at Oil City in Pennsylvania, Major Styer said.

Thus, in a series of "one-night stands," the engineers hope to accumulate their information.

Of the three Ohio routes for linking the busy Ohio river with Lake Erie, the Pittsburgh-Ashtabula proposal offers the shortest haul from river to lake. This route, which leaves the Ohio river 30 miles below Pittsburgh, at Beaver and follows the Beaver and Mahoning rivers out to the Keystone state into Ohio, is only 101.2 miles long.

LENGTHS SAME

The other two Ohio routes run almost parallel northward to the westward end of Lake Erie, and differ in total length by only one mile.

From Cincinnati, one route follows the Miami river past Dayton and Piquette and then cuts overland to join the Maumee river for an eventual outlet into the harbor at Toledo. The total distance is 241 miles.

The Portsmouth-Sandusky route measures 240 miles, following the Scioto river northward through Chillicothe, Circleville and Coshocton into the Sandusky river and thence into Lake Erie at Sandusky.

Present plans for the canal provide a passage varying from 200 to 300 feet in width, and with a uniform depth of 12 feet, according to Major Styer. Engineering features of the proposal are yet under study.

Elevations of the two all-Ohio routes vary little, Portsmouth being only 42 feet higher at the river end and 25 feet lower at the summit pool than the Cincinnati waterway. Each empties into Lake Erie at an elevation of 573 feet.

The Pittsburgh-Ashtabula route begins at an elevation of 668 feet or the Ohio river at Beaver, rises to a maximum of 900 feet at the summit pool and drops to 573 feet at Ashtabula.

Greater elevation is found on the French creek route, which goes from the 703 to 1072 feet before dropping to the lake level.

AGED WOMEN DIE IN BLAZE

Widows of Civil War Veterans Unable To Help Selves In 'Home' Fire.

BROOKVILLE, Pa., Feb. 20.—Trapped in their rooms in the hospital building of the Pennsylvania Memorial home, ten aged women met a horrible death as flames demolished the one-story frame structure while the mercury hung below the zero mark here today.

Awakened by the shrill cry of a night nurse, who discovered the flames as they roared through the 50-year-old structure, three women jumped from their beds and ran to safety while two others were rescued. The majority of the victims, asleep and unconscious of the danger, died in their beds.

Their charred bodies, found on the bed springs after the flames died out, told the gruesome story. Victims of the conflagration that swept the building maintained for the widows and women relatives of Civil War veterans all were Pennsylvanians. They were:

Mrs. Elizabeth Loveland, 76, Moscow; Mrs. Helena Setley, 75, Tionesta; Mrs. Florence Roberts, 84, Pleasantville; Miss Mida Crompton, 65, Scranton; Mrs. Jennie Shewers, 94, Reynoldsville; Miss Martha Moore, 74, Baxter; Miss Margaret Perry, 76, Grove City; Mrs. Mary Margin, 81, Verona; Mrs. Mary Gannon, 80, Sunbury; and Miss Christie Bopst, 85, Reading.

ARTICLES STOLEN BY FRIEND FOUND

Man Wanted by Five Counties Helps Officers Find Schools' Property.

Nearly all articles stolen from the Commercial Point and Darbyville schools by Elmer Friend, 45, now held in Delaware, have been recovered by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Miller Fissell.

The officers were in a number of central Ohio cities, Monday, with Friend seeking the articles. Four violins were found in Zanesville, a saxophone in Newark, a radio, 9x12 rug and an electric clock, in Columbus. All were stolen from the Scioto-twp school at Commercial Point.

Friend sold each of the violins for $1, the rug for $6, the radio for $3, the electric clock for 50 cents, and the saxophone for $6.

Tools stolen from the manual training department of the Muhlenberg school at Darbyville were also recovered at farm houses between Columbus and Marion.

Friend is held in Delaware to face charges of robbing two homes in that county. Four other counties, Pickaway, Franklin, Licking, and Fairfield also want him.

Belgium's King Told of Danger

BRUSSELS, Feb. 20.—The body of King Albert of the Belgians, who loved danger for its own sake and thereby lost his life, lies in state today in the great hall of the Royal palace here.

An endowing reverence, an unending stream of Belgian people files past his bier, to look for the last time on the face of their sovereign, who plunged to his death while scaling a steep cliff above the river Meuse, near Namur, Saturday.

Every hour at least 6,000 people enter the main door of the palace, pass by the flower-banked bier and file sorrowfully out.

The body will lie in state until noon tomorrow in the lofty room known as the Salon de Pensée.

The funeral services will be held Thursday in the cathedral of St. Gude.

That King Albert had been warned against taking the risks involved in mountain-climbing, his favorite sport, and had scorned them, was revealed today by Emile Cigneffe, president of the Belgian Senate. Senator Cigneffe said he recently asked the king not to take so many risks.

COUNCIL GRANT SLASH IN FIRE HYDRANT RATE

$15 Per Hydrant Taken From Present Cost of $55 Annually

DOMESTIC IS SAME

Report 48-cent Gas Rate Gaining Momentum

City Solicitor Carl C. Lake, today, was preparing an ordinance to be presented at the city council meeting, Wednesday evening, establishing new rates for the hydrant rental and for special hydrant terms.

Officials of the Ohio Water Service Co., including Mr. Dan Ellis, and Harry B. Demmon, superintendent, conferred with the council in a committee meeting until nearly 11 p. m. Monday, which time a reduction agreement was reached.

While the contemplated change does not reduce the price by the domestic user it does save for the city and the plants which have sprinkler systems.

It is reported the water board agreed to slash $15 per hydrant off the price of $55 annually for each. The price in sprinkler system cost $25 cent.

An agreement on payment of bill now owed by the city to the hydrant rental wherein the city does not have to pay interest on the sum of more than $5,000 was also reported.

All members of council, Councilman Dan Ryan, Mayor B. Cady, and Solicitor Lake, attended the meeting. Mr. Lake, instructed to have his ordinance ready to present Wednesday evening at the regular council meeting. Councilman Marion, who arranged the meeting, was chairman of the session.

GAS ACTION STALLED

A movement is gathering momentum in council to pass a rate, following in the footsteps of the Chillicothe council. The ordinance will be presented Wednesday evening to that effect.

Chillicothe rejected the Fuel Gas Co.'s offer and a 48-cent ordinance which was utility to impose the rate between the city and the company. The city's ordinance now comes before the commission decision whether a 48-cent rate is fair.

Gas company officials have formed Chillicothe they do not want for the 48-cent rate and will appeal to the Commission.

After Chillicothe passed the ordinance under suspension of the without a dissenting vote, 12 engineers for $2,800 to determine if that rate is a fair one.

The telegram, delivered to Brown while the latter was on the witness stand before the Black committee, contained only four words—"be of good cheer."

Brown declared, "I am disturbed that it was given out. I did not authorize its release."

During the series on "Will War Come?", the Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round, read each day by many Circleville and Pickaway-co residents, will appear on an inside page of The Herald.

E. L. HOFFMAN IS CANDIDATE

S. Court-St Man Circulating Petition For Treasurer's Nomination.

Earl L. Hoffman, S. Court-st, announced Tuesday that he had put his petition into circulation for the Democratic nomination for county treasurer.

In announcing his candidacy, Mr. Hoffman said the County Home Rule amendment passed at the last election by Ohio voters repealed Section 10 of the Ohio constitution which ruled that no person could serve as treasurer more than four out of six years. This meant that no one could serve three terms consecutively.

Since this amendment has been voted a number of county officials, over Ohio, including sheriffs, because it includes them too, have announced themselves for a third two-year term.

Treasurer, sheriff, recorder, prosecutor and clerk of courts' terms are for only two years each while probate judge, auditor, commissioner, and surveyor are each for four years, and common pleas judge is for six years.

COLUMBUS AGAIN REQUESTS WHITE TO FIRE HOPPLE

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6.—A new drive aimed to force the removal of E. J. Hopple as chairman of the Ohio Public Utilities commission was opened here today by the Columbus City council.

Undeterred by the recent refusal of Governor George White to oust the utilities chairman, the city council unanimously passed a resolution reiterating its stand against Hopple and charging him with having "lost the public confidence as an impartial arbitrator in public utility matters."

The resolution, which called upon the governor for a second time to remove Hopple, was expected to be circulated among other cities in the state with a request for their cooperation in a new drive to oust the utilities commissioner.

LIBEL IS DENIED BY LIMA EDITOR IN PIERPONT CASE

LIMA, Feb. 20.—A plea of not guilty was entered here today by Earl R. Leach, editor, and the Lima News Publishing Co., to charges of criminal libel filed by City Solicitor Charles W. Long, counsel for one of the Dillinger gangsters now facing trial for murder in connection with the slaying of Sheriff Jess Sawyer.

The charges were contained in affidavits which cited in an article February 14 which declared that Long, city solicitor, should not serve as defense counsel for Harry Pierpont.

TEMPERATURE THREE BELOW

Warmer Weather Predicted; Six Known Dead In Chicago From Cold.

Circleville's temperature fell to three below zero Tuesday morning, Dr. H. R. Clarke's thermometer showed.

The coldest hour was believed to be shortly after midnight. Fears of a protracted cold spell were dispelled by weather observers who predicted a steady rise in temperatures, beginning this afternoon.

At 8 a. m. official thermometer readings were zero at Columbus and Cleveland, and four degrees above at Cincinnati. Northern Ohio was hard hit by the frigid temperatures, Norwalk thermometers registering 21 below and Bowling Green 17 below.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Six persons were dead here in the wake of the sudden cold wave that was sliding eastward today after dropping temperatures to an official minimum reading of eight degrees above zero.

All six victims died from cold and exposure. Today the mercury was steadily rising to the freezing mark. Extra crews of workers were completing the job of removing four inches of snow from streets, boulevards and railroad right of ways.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—New York awoke this morning to find itself literally snowbound as a blizzard of unparalleled intensity swept through the canyons between its tall buildings.

All forms of transportation except the subway suffered one of the worst tie-ups since the legendary blizzard of '88. It was impossible for thousands of New Yorkers living in the boroughs outside of Manhattan to come to work.

Many more suburbanites were snowbound. Trains were running, although far behind schedules, and many could not get to the stations.

The committee, however, is expected to make an endorsement for the vacancy left on the Board of Elections by the death of Samuel T. Rife, chairman of the board.

Several other endorsements are to be made as various positions are received from state and national Civil Service commissions. The Democratic committee is expected to be asked to select a liquor store supervisor, cashier, and clerk. Three names will also be submitted in the examination for Williamsport postmaster, this test being taken last Saturday.

ARMY STARTS LAKE-TO-OHIO CANAL SURVEY

Public Hearings Planned in Dayton, Youngstown, and Columbus

STUDY 3 ROUTES

Major Styer in Charge of Scioto River Survey

COLUMBUS, Feb. 20.—Two representatives of the district U. S. army engineers headquarters at Pittsburgh were in Ohio today assimilating evidence in support of three Ohio routes suggested for a proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River canal.

Their task is to contact and interview civic, business and industrial proponents of the routes preliminary to public hearings that will be held at Dayton, Columbus and Youngstown early next month.

Acting under Major W. D. Styer, district chief engineer in charge of the special report on the canal survey, George Kershaw, assistant engineer, and William Sheppard, Jr., associated engineer, left Pittsburgh for an extended 10-day survey of the Ohio fields.

SEEKS INFORMATION

"We wish to have all the evidence of an economic nature that can be offered to justify each of the proposed routes in Ohio as well as the Allegheny River-French creek route in Pennsylvania," Major Styer explained. "Naturally we must call upon the interested business, civic and industrial organizations and individuals for this information." He added:

"Because this is a report on previous surveys made by Colonel Kutz in 1925, our data on the economic possibilities of each route must be brought up to date. We are anxious to hear from all interested parties. The engineering data, of course, we will dig out ourselves."

Public hearings have been tentatively for March 8 and 9 at Dayton, Columbus and Youngstown in Ohio, and at Oil City in Pennsylvania, Major Styer said.

Thus, in a brief series of "one-night" standees, the engineers hope to accumulate their information. Of the three Ohio routes for linking the busy Ohio river with Lake Erie, the Pittsburgh-Ashtabula proposal offers the shortest haul from river to lake. This route, which leaves the Ohio river 30 miles below Pittsburgh at Beaver and follows the Beaver and Mahoning rivers out of the Keystone state into Ohio, is only 101.3 miles long.

LENGTHS SAME

The other two Ohio routes run almost parallel northward to the westward end of Lake Erie, and differ in total length by only one mile.

From Cincinnati, one route follows the Miami river past Dayton and Piqua and then cuts overland to join the Maumee river for an eventual outlet into the harbor at Toledo. The total distance is 241 miles.

The Portsmouth-Sandusky route measures 240 miles, following the Scioto river northward through Chillicothe, Circleville and Columbus to the Sandusky river and thence into Lake Erie at Sandusky.

Present plans for the canal provide a passage varying from 200 to 300 feet in width, and with a uniform depth of 12 feet, according to Major Styer. Engineering features of the proposal are yet under study.

Elevations of the two all-Ohio routes vary little, Portsmouth being only 42 feet higher at the river end and 25 feet lower at the summit pool than the Cincinnati waterway. Each empties into Lake Erie at an elevation of 573 feet.

The Pittsburgh-Ashtabula route begins at an elevation of 668 feet on the Ohio river at Beaver, rises to a maximum of 890 feet at the summit pool and drops to 573 feet at Ashtabula harbor.

Greater elevation is found on the French creek route, which goes from 703 to 1072 feet before dropping to the lake level.

Mrs. Orion King, of the Pickaway-co Garden club, disclosed, Tuesday, that she has received a communication from the office of State Highway Director O. W. Morrell that a request for the department to beautify the Scioto Trail from the south corporation of Circleville to the Rossco line has been turned over to H. D. Schoonover, division engineer.

The highway beautification program is being stressed by the highway department. The Garden club is boosting the project in this county.

AGED WOMEN DIE IN BLAZE

Widows of Civil War Veterans Unable To Help Selves In 'Home' Fire.

BROOKVILLE, Pa., Feb. 20.—Trapped in their rooms in the hospital building of the Pennsylvania Memorial home, ten aged women met a horrible death as flames demolished the one-story frame structure while the mercury hung below the zero mark here today.

Awakened by the shrill cry of a night nurse, who discovered the flames as they roared through the 50-year-old structure, three women jumped from their beds and ran to safety while two others were rescued. The majority of the victims, asleep and unconscious of the danger, died in their beds. Their charred bodies, found on the bed springs after the flames died out, told the gruesome story.

Victims of the conflagration that swept the building maintained for the widows and women relatives of Civil War veterans all were Pennsylvanians. They were:

Mrs. Elizabeth Loveland, 76, Moscow; Mrs. Helena Seay, 75, Tionesta; Mrs. Florence Roberts, 64, Pleasantville; Miss Mida Compton, 65, Scranton; Mrs. Jennie Showers, 94, Reynoldsville; Miss Martha Moore, 74, Baxter; Miss Margaret Perry, 76, Grove City; Mrs. Mary Margin, 81, Verona; Mrs. Mary Gannon, 80, Sunbury; and Miss Christie Bobst, 64, Reading.

ARTICLES STOLEN BY FRIEND FOUND

Man Wanted by Five Counties Helps Officers Find Schools' Property.

Nearly all articles stolen from the Commercial Point and Darbyville schools by Elmer Friend, 45, now held in Delaware, have been recovered by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Miller Fissell.

The officers were in a number of central Ohio cities, Monday, with Friend seeking the articles. Four violins were found in Zanewels, a saxophone in Newark, a radio, 9x12 rug and an electric clock, in Columbus. All were stolen from the Scioto-twtp school at Commercial Point.

Friend sold each of the violins for $1, the rug for $6, the radio for $3, the electric clock for 50 cents, and the saxophone for $6.

Tools stolen from the manual training department of the Muhlenberg school at Darbyville were also recovered at farm houses between Columbus and Marion.

Friend is held in Delaware to face charges of robbing two homes in that county. Four other counties, Pickaway, Franklin, Licking, and Fairfield also want him.

Belgium's King Told of Danger

Scorned Advice of Senate; Body In State, 6,000 Passing Each Hour.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 20.—The body of King Albert of the Belgians, who loved danger for his own sake and thereby lost his life, lies in state today in the great hall of the Royal palace here.

And slowly, reverently, an unending stream of the Belgian people files past his bier, to look for the last time on the face of their sovereign, who plunged to his death while scaling a steep cliff above the river Meuse, near Namur, Saturday.

Every hour at least 6,000 people enter the main door of the palace, pass by the flower-banked bier and file sorrowfully out.

The body will lie in state until noon tomorrow in the lofty room known as the Salon de Penseur. The funeral services will be held Thursday in the cathedral of St. Gudule.

That King Albert had been warned against taking the risks involved in mountain-climbing, his favorite sport, and had scorned them, was revealed today by Emile Gignefie, president of the Belgian Senate. Senator Gignefie said he recently asked the king not to take so many risks.

COUNCIL GAINS SLASH IN FIRE HYDRANT RATE

$15 Per Hydrant Taken From Present Cost of $55 Annually

DOMESTIC IS SAME

Report 48-cent Gas Rate Gaining Momentum

City Solicitor Carl C. Leist, Tuesday, was preparing an ordinance to be presented at the City council meeting, Wednesday evening, establishing new rates for fire hydrant rental and for sprinkler systems.

Officials of the Ohio Water Service Co., including Mr. Dark, Mr. Ellis, and Harry E. Demman, local superintendent, conferred with council in a committee session until nearly 11 p. m. Monday at which time a reduction agreement was reached.

While the contemplated ordinance does not reduce the price paid by the domestic user it provides a saving for the city and the several plants which have sprinkler systems.

It is reported the water company agreed to slash $15 per fire hydrant off the price of $55 now paid annually for each. The reduction in sprinkler system cost is 25 per cent.

An agreement on payment of the bill now owed by the city for hydrant rental wherein the city does not have to pay interest on its debt of more than $8,000 was also reported.

All members of council, except Councilman Dan Ryan, Mayor W. B. Cady, and Solicitor Leist attended the meeting. Mr. Leist was instructed to have his ordinance ready to present Wednesday evening at the regular session of council. Councilman Frank A. Marion, who arranged the confab, was chairman of the meeting.

GAS ACTION NEAR?
A movement is gaining momentum in council to pass a 48-cent gas rate, following in the footsteps of the Chillicothe council. Whether an ordinance will be presented Wednesday evening to that effect is not certain.

Chillicothe rejected the Ohio Fuel Gas Co.'s offer and passed a 48-cent ordinance which forces the utility to impound the difference between the rate now collected and the city's ordinance until the Utilities commission decides whether a 48-cent rate is fair.

Gas company officials have informed Chillicothe they do not care for the 48-cent rate and will appeal to the Commission.

After Chillicothe passed its ordinance under suspension of rules without a dissenting vote, it hired engineers for $2,600 to determine if that rate is a fair one.

SESSIONS OF BASKETBALL CARDED

Out This and That

BY THE
COND. QUASSER

A round of games is over and the tourney and we can't say we haven't seen a team that can come out of the Ashville boys' team, New Holland, Ashville, opponent, has not made an appearance, and we have the Walnut and Muhlenberg teams.

The only hope that can be seen between the Ashville and Holland teams is that Pickaway defeated the Hobblemen at Holland by a two point margin during the season, and Ashville has a time turning back the coaches' quarter. A basketball game is certain when the teams meet. Jim Seibert and Landman for New Holland is expected to be the tip of the larger part of the game, but Seibert's ruggedness, ability on the floor when it comes to handling the ball, and potential tie ups the opponent in the pivot position, a wide program margin, a taller opponent.

There may be an awfully long one that may go far, but we wouldn't be a bit surprised to see Ashville and Williamsport meet in the finals. Ashville defeat New Holland will meet the winner of the Perry game which should be a Williamsport must. Muhlenberg-two for the play the winner of the Soloto game. This Seibert may do more in the game than most people expect, but too is to be seen.

Our belief that the Ashville game played at 7 p. m. will provide the contest of the tournament. Ashville will concentrate on stopping Ellen Williams with Charlotte Rose, assigned the job, while commercial pointers must stop Rose, believed to be Ashville's threat.

Yankees Sign

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The New York Yankees announced today that they had signed four players to contracts for the coming season.

Seven performers still remain signed. In Brooklyn the Dodgers' surprise when Joe Stripp, a baseman, returned his signed contract, along with a letter expressing satisfaction at the terms offered him.

Stripp had been definitely expected to join the holdout ranks. Brooklyn team have repeated offers to trade him during the last months.

High School Plays Here Wednesday Evening and C. A. C. on Thursday.

BERGHOFFS TO COME

Three County Tourney Sessions Are Scheduled.

This promises to be a big week for Circleville and Pickaway basketball fans. Beginning Wednesday evening the Circleville Athletic club gymnasium will be busy every night through Saturday.

Wednesday evening, the high school cagers takes on Bexley in a Central Buckeye league contest. The Tigers are confident they can whip the Bexleyites to gain their initial victory of the year in the C.B.L. Bexley lost its only star performer, Bob Magnusson, at mid-year and since that time the team has been sadly in the dumps.

Coach Pete Herberholz plans to use Grant at Center, Speakman and Jenkins at guard, and Leasure and Henry at forwards. Leasure has been suffering with a boil and John Jenkins was bruised last week preventing his appearance in the Delaware contest. Coleman will see service, the mentor intimidated.

BEGIN AT 7:15

The reserve teams of the two schools will tangle at 7:15 p. m. with Virgil Simmons, of Greenfield, as the official.

The Tigers will close their season's schedule Friday evening at Grandview.

Thursday evening, the Circleville Athletic club team will play the fast Berghoff girls outfit of Dayton. The contest will be played under boys' rules.

The C. A. C. quintet, undefeated this season, goes to Washington C. H. Wednesday evening to play the Guardians in a return engagement. A tough contest is expected because the locals were able to eke out only a nine-point victory on the local court.

SEE LARGE CROWD

The Thursday game is expected to draw a large crowd. It isn't very often that a girls' team is interesting to most fans but these Berghoff girls have a fine record against some of the fastest men's teams in Ohio. They lost only three points at Washington C. H. to the same team the Club is playing.

The preliminary to the C. A. C. game will be between the Emory club and the Methodist church team.

Friday evening, the county championship games are resumed with four boys' games on the schedule. Saturday afternoon and evening will see more activity in with semi-finals and finals in the county race to be played.

BURTON IS HERE

A group of Negro spiritualists, of Columbus, headed by Rev. Mutual Burton, of Cleveland, will be here Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Church of the Nazarene, to render Jubilee songs.

Wisconsin Only Purdue Threat

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Wisconsin's Badgers today loom as the only remaining possible threat to Purdue in the Western conference basketball title race following five games last night that saw Illinois and Indiana dropped from ranks of contenders by Northwestern and Iowa, respectively.

While Purdue was winning its seventh game in eight starts by a 47 to 30 score at Minnesota, Wisconsin leaped into second place in the standings by scoring a fourth consecutive victory, 32 to 26, at Michigan. Wisconsin now has a record of five victories and three losses after a dismal start.

In a contest that was as bitterly fought as though the championship were at stake Northwestern took third place by whipping Illinois, 32 to 25, here in Evanston. The score of Iowa's decision over Indiana at Iowa City was 29 to 26. Chicago stayed in the cellar by taking a 33 to 30 setback at Ohio State.

Wisconsin's hopes of overtaking Purdue remained slim at the best, for the Boilermakers have stretched a wide gap between themselves and the rest of the pack.

At 3:30 a. m. today attendants at the hospital said McGraw was "resting comfortably," and that although his condition was "grave," death was not expected immediately.

The baseball leader's personal physician, Dr. Louis E. Chapman, spent most of the early evening at McGraw's bedside. He left the hospital shortly after midnight, leaving instructions that he be summoned should the patient's condition become worse during the night.

Only two persons were permitted to see McGraw yesterday. They were his wife and Charles A. Stoneham, president of the Giants.

thousands of cubic feet of gas used for cooking per year and find that their total annual savings amount to $26.25 on this one item, used for one purpose.
This money goes to Mrs. Johnson to take advantage of other bargains, because they apportion the money for insurance and other investments directly from Carl's earnings. Recently she has noticed some exceptional bargains advertised in this newspaper by local merchants. Economic forecasts, present prices and the advertisements, themselves, all say "Buy Now." Mrs. Johnson intends to do that very thing with the $26.25 she has saved by cooking with gas. It is surprising the number of items that this amount of money will buy.

5 SESSIONS OF BASKETBALL CARDED

About This And That

BY THE
SECOND GUESSER

The first round of games is over in the county tourney and we can say frankly we haven't seen a team in the tournament that can come close to stopping the Ashville boys. But then, New Holland Ashville's Friday opponent, has not yet made an appearance, and neither have the Walnut and Muhlenberg teams.

About the only dope that can be figured between the Ashville and New Holland teams is that Pickaway defeated the Hobblesmen at New Holland by a two point margin during the season, and Ashville an easy time turning back the Hobbles-coached quintet. A battle of centers seems certain when the contenders meet. Jim Scoles for Ashville and Landman for New Holland. Landman is expected to get the tip the larger part of the game, but Scoles' ruggedness, his ability on the floor when it comes to handling the ball, and this potential tie upsets the opponent's basket in the pivot position give him a wide pre game margin over his taller opponent.

This may be an awfully long shot and one that may go far astray but we wouldn't be a bit surprised to see Ashville and Williamsport meet in the finals. Should Ashville defeat New Holland it will meet the winner of the Darby-Perry game which should be Darby. Williamsport must turn back Muhlenberg-twop for the right to play the winner of the Walnut-Scioto game. This Scioto team may do more in the tournament than most people think, but that, too is to be seen.

It is our belief that the Ashville-Scioto girls game played at 7 p. m. Saturday will provide the competitive high spot of the tournament. Ashville will concentrate its efforts on stopping Ellen Williams with Charlotte Reese probably being assigned the job, while the Commercial Pointers must stop Pauline Reese, believed to be Ashville's greatest threat.

4 Yankees Sign

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The New York Yankees announced today that four more players had affixed their signatures to contracts for the 1934 season.

The players to enter the fold are Earle Combs, veteran outfielder; Johnny Murphy, former Fordham pitcher; Norman Kies, a catcher who was with Newark last year, and Floyd Newkirk, a rookie hurler from St. Paul.

Eighteen performers still remain unsigned.

Over in Brooklyn the Dodgers got a big surprise when Joe Stripp, third-baseman, returned his signed contract along with a letter expressing satisfaction at the terms offered him.

Stripp had been definitely expected to join the holdout ranks. The Brooklyn team have repeated efforts to trade him during the last two months.

High School Plays Here Wednesday Evening and C. A. C. on Thursday.

BERGHOFFS TO COME

Three County Tourney Sessions Are Scheduled.

This promises to be a big week for Circleville and Pickaway-co basketball fans. Beginning Wednesday evening the Circleville Athletic club gymnasium will be busy every night through Saturday.

Wednesday evening, the high school cagers takes on Bexley in a Central Buckeye league contest. The Tigers are confident they can whip the Bexleyites to gain their initial victory of the year in the CBL. Bexley lost its only star performer, Bob Magnusson, at mid-year and since that time the team has been sadly in the 'dumps.'

Coach Pete Herberholz plans to use Grant at Center, Speakman and Jenkins at guard, and Leasure and Henry at forwards. Leasure has been suffering with a boil and John Jenkins was bruised last week preventing his appearance in the Delaware contest. Coleman will see service, the mentor intimating.

BEGIN AT 7:15

The reserve teams of the two schools will tangle at 7:15 p. m. with Virgil Simmons, of Greenfield, as the official.

The Tigers will close their season's schedule Friday evening at Grandview.

Thursday evening, the Circleville Athletic club team will play the fast Berghoff girls outfit of Dayton. The contest will be played under boys' rules.

The C. A. C. quintet, undefeated this season, goes to Washington C. H. Wednesday evening to play the Guardians in a return engagement. A tough contest is expected because the locals were able to eke out only a nine-point victory on the local court.

SEE LARGE CROWD

The Thursday game is expected to draw a large crowd. It isn't very often that a girls' team is interesting to most fans but these Berghoff girls have a fine record against some of the fastest men's teams in Ohio. They lost only three points at Washington C. H. to the same team the Club is playing.

The preliminary to the C. A. C. game will be between the Emery club and the Methodist church team.

Friday evening, the county championship games are resumed with four boys' games on the schedule. Saturday afternoon and evening will see more activity in with semi-finals and finals in the county race to be played.

BURTON IS HERE

A group of Negro spiritualists, of Columbus, headed by Rev. Mutual Burton, of Cleveland, will be here Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Church of the Nazarenes, to render Jubilee songs.

A feature will be the dramatization of the crucifixion of Christ with spirituals under candle light effect.

A special divine message will be delivered at the African Methodist church by Rev. M. Burton, Wednesday evening on "I Saw an Angel of the Lord Who Talked With Me."

Wisconsin Only Purdue Threat

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Wisconsin's Badgers today loom as the only remaining possible threat to Purdue in the Western conference basketball title race following five games last night that saw Illinois and Indiana dropped from ranks of contenders by Northwestern and Iowa, respectively.

While Purdue was winning its seventh game in eight starts by a 47 to 30 score at Minnesota, Wisconsin leaped into second place in the standings by scoring a fourth consecutive victory, 32 to 26, at Michigan. Wisconsin now has a record of five victories and three losses after a dismal start.

In a contest that was as bitterly fought as though the championship were at stake Northwestern took third place by whipping Illinois, 32 to 25, here in Evanston. The score of Iowa's decision over Indiana at Iowa City was 29 to 26. Chicago stayed in the cellar by taking a 33 to 30 setback at Ohio State.

Wisconsin's hopes of overtaking Purdue remained slim at the best, for the Boilermakers have stretched a wide gap between themselves and the rest of the pack.

"I Can Buy Now Because I Cook With Gas"

CARL JOHNSON is a life insurance salesman, and planning savings is his daily work. He and his wife use the same plan in their family budget that he recommends for others. Carl thinks that some savings should go for insurance, some for other stable investments and some for taking advantage of special prices on goods for future consumption.

The Johnsons have found that judicious buying is one way to save that many overlook. They count gas for cooking as one of their greatest bargains because it is worth $1.75 more per 1000 cubic feet than is asked for it, as compared to substitute fuels, based on the findings of a large university.

They multiply $1.75 by the number of thousands of cubic feet of gas used for cooking per year and find that their total annual savings amount to $26.25 on this one item, used for one purpose.

This money goes to Mrs. Johnson to take advantage of other bargains, because they apportion the money for insurance and other investments directly from Carl's earnings. Recently she has noticed some exceptional bargains advertised in this newspaper by local merchants. Economic forecasts, present prices and the advertisements, themselves, all say "Buy Now." Mrs. Johnson intends to do that very thing with the $26.25 she has saved by cooking with gas. It is surprising the number of items that this amount of money will buy.

Wynekoop Tired as Trial Starts

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop today showed signs of restlessness at her second trial for the weird operating table murder of her pretty daughter-in-law, Rheta, as the questioning of prospective jurors proceeded slowly.

The 63 year old physician, whose grave physical condition brought the first trial to a sudden end, said she was eager to have "my day in court" and tell her own version of how Rheta Wynekoop died in the basement operating room.

After a brief opening session the trial was postponed until today at the request of Dr. Wynekoop's attorney, W. W. Smith, who was suffering with a bad tooth. Dr. Wynekoop showed further concern at the delay which the court holiday Tuesday will cause in the trial.

TO DEMAND DEATH

Of sixteen veniremen questioned regarding their views on inflicting the death penalty twelve were excused and the remaining four locked

ed up for further questioning before they are accepted. Assistant Prosecutor Charles S. Daugherty qualified the prospective jurors for the death penalty. As at the first trial, Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, daughter of the aged physician, was constantly at the side of the defendant in the courtroom. Although a wheel chair was still being used to transport Dr. Wynekoop from the county jail to the courtroom of Judge Harry B. Miller, Dr. Wynekoop's physical condition was presumably improved.

While her cheeks were pale and her body drooping at the first trial there was a noticeable trace of color in the defendant's face. She showed a livelier interest in the courtroom proceedings.

Earle Wynekoop, husband of the slain Rheta, continued to remain away from the second trial as he had at the first. State's attorney's police refused to say whether they were still seeking him.

AIR MAIL

up to the weather.

At Newark airport the scheduled first flight of the day, a 5:30 a. m. departure for Chicago with the airmail collected overnight in New York, was called off "indefinitely" by Major B. O. Jones, commanding officer.

A large United Air liner from Cleveland landed safely at the field at 7:30 a. m. and stalled in a snowbank. It was not carrying mail.

SURVEY STARTED

At Bolling field in Washington, Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover in charge of the eastern air mail zone took off in the only ship to leave. He planned a "cross country" flight for weather details.

At Boston the blizzard grounded all planes covering the airport with several inches of snow.

The storm over the Alleghenies stopped air mail service east of Pittsburgh. Mail arriving from Chicago was continued east by train.

The middle west reported good flying weather and extreme cold but the Rockies were shrouded in fog and snow.

The first army plane on the San Francisco-Salt Lake City route was grounded at Sacramento, Cal., by "bad weather over the Sierras." The first army plane to take mail from Salt Lake City for Los Angeles grounded at Milford, Utah.

The dispatch of mail from Los Angeles East via Salt Lake City last night was sent by train because of the weather.

Despite the weather, however, the Western Air express transport left Los Angeles on schedule last night carrying the last load of mail allowed it. It planned to drop the mail at Las Vegas, Nev., and continue without it as it would be illegal to carry it after midnight.

Two army flyers enroute from their Riverside, Cal., base to their mail assignments at Los Angeles and San Francisco were forced down yesterday by the weather.

TRAIN USED

The army plane starting the mail on the Dallas, Texas, Cleveland, Ohio, route last night lacked speed for all the mail. Some had to be sent by train.

Urge Corn-Hog Growers to Sign U. S. Contracts

Corn and hog growers of the state are being urged to sign the government adjustment contracts by the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation as a means of increasing their purchasing power, according to a statement made this week by Murray D. Lincoln, executive secretary, at Columbus.

"It is organized agriculture's plan of securing parity prices for these farm products by reducing supplies to a home market demand, and to provide benefit payments to enhance immediate purchasing power," says Mr. Lincoln. "The Agricultural Adjustment Act was formulated by the nation's farm leaders a year ago and sponsored through Congress, to restore the industry which had received the lowest parity level in history at that time."

NOT YET AT PEAK

"The beneficial effects of the act have not reached their fullness. A steady program has proved a distinct stimulus to recovery in areas where it has been carried out," states the official. "If an extensive sign-up of corn and hog growers is secured in Ohio, it will add several million dollars to the purchasing ability of agriculture in the state during the next 12 months. The co-operation of all eligible signers will bring it upwards of 17 million dollars to the corn and hog growers of Ohio."

"Even greater benefits are expected to result from the 20 per cent reduction in corn acreage and the 25 per cent reduction in the number of hogs produced in 1934, bringing production figures down to co-supper market demands, where higher prices will result in the following year. The farmer who refuses to co-operate is only delaying the time when all farmers will receive parity prices."

AID DAIRY FARMERS

The solution of the dairy problem is outstanding as a matter of farm relief, states C. A. Dyer, state legislative representative of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, this week at headquarters in Columbus.

"There is talk nationally of reducing dairy animals 25 per cent in order to eliminate the surplus of dairy products," he says. "We should also protect the dairy industry from the competition of vegetable fats coming in from Oriental countries."

"Our foreign market for lard and other animal fats has been practically destroyed, but we would have use for them here at home, if there was protection against the importation of foreign vegetable fats."

"A bill is pending before Congress to place a tariff on imported vegetable fats. It has been reported out favorably by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives. Every dairyman in Ohio should write his Congressman and Senators Pass and Bulkeley, insisting that they support this legislation."

The First President's Birthday

To celebrate Washington's birthday an afternoon of bridge will be indulged in by many folks. Parties, dancing and more bridge will be amusing for the evening hours. Patriotism will be evident in the show of the national colors in decorations, table service and food.

Did you say, "Who is going to have blue food?" The snappy answer to that question may be, "What's the difference?" There are plenty of ways to avoid worrying about it, and a table set with blue glass goblets, or a cloth with blue checks or stripes would serve the purpose, and be modernistic as well as appropriate for the season. However, there are harmless vegetable colorings made, nowadays, that can be used freely, but artistically please, to violate the most rigid natural laws regarding the color of things.

Menu for a Washington's Birthday

Cherry Cluster Salad
Chopped Olive, Minced Celery and Mayonnaise Sandwiches
Ice Cream Molds
Washington Mounds Coffee

The Cherry Cluster is an especially attractive salad, and the old story of the cherry tree connects the cherry with the celebration of our hero's birthday. To serve six, these ingredients are required:

- 1/2 C. chopped nutmeats
- 1/2 C. mayonnaise
- 6 lettuce cups
- 6 halves of canned peaches
- 1 pkg. soft cream cheese
- 1 can Royal Anne cherries

Combine the nutmeats and mayonnaise. Arrange cups of lettuce and in each place a spoonful of nuts and dressing. Drain the juice from the peach halves, drying thoroughly with a soft linen towel. Cream the cheese and spread the rounding side of the peaches. Cover the cheese completely, using the cherries that have been cut in halves and stoned. The effect is that of a cluster of cherries. Place the peaches over the mayonnaise on the leaf of lettuce to produce a most appropriate as well as delightful party salad.

The sandwiches are cleverly cut with a hatchet-shaped cutter and harmonize with the idea of the cherry salad.

Washington Mounds are related more nearly to the macaroon than to any other kind of edible, in case you were wondering what they are. Here is the recipe, and the Mounds can be used the year 'round if you like them:

- Washington Mounds
- 1/4 C. sugar
- 1 egg white
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1 C. rice flakes
- 1 C. chopped nuts
- 1/2 C. chopped candied cherries
- 1 C. shredded coconut
- 1/4 tsp. almond extract

Beat the egg white and salt until very stiff. Add sugar, gradually beating it in with the beater. Fold in the rice flakes mixed with the nuts, cherries and coconut, then add the almond extract. Drop by tablespoonfuls on a well greased cookie sheet and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) for 10 minutes, or until firm.

A hot dish could be added to this menu, if you choose to have a dinner bridge, or a more substantial menu, and Ham and Olives with Mushroom Sauce is a colorful suggestion.

Ham and Olives with Mushroom Sauce

- 2 Tbsp. butter
- 1 Tbsp. flour
- 2 C. milk
- 1/2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. pepper
- 1/2 C. dried, cold, cooked ham
- 2 Tbsp. stuffed olives, chopped
- 1 loaf dry bread for toast cakes

Melt butter in a saucepan, add flour and stir together until well blended. Add milk and seasonings and cook until thick. Add ham and olives and heat thoroughly.

Wynekoop Tired as Trial Starts

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. — Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop today showed signs of restlessness at her second trial for the weird operating table murder of her pretty daughter-in-law, Rheta, as the questioning of prospective jurors proceeded slowly.

The 63 year old physician, whose grave physical condition brought the first trial to a sudden end, said she was eager to have "my day in court" and tell her own version of how Rheta Wynekoop died in the basement operating room.

After a brief opening session the trial was postponed until today at the request of Dr. Wynekoop's attorney, W. W. Smith, who was suffering with a bad tooth. Dr. Wynekoop showed further concern at the delay which the court holiday Tuesday will cause in the trial.

TO DEMAND DEATH

Of sixteen veniremen questioned regarding their views on inflicting the death penalty twelve were excused and the remaining four locked up for further questioning before they are accepted.

Assistant Prosecutor Charles S. Daugherty qualified the prospective jurors for the death penalty.

As at the first trial, Dr. Catharine Wynekoop, daughter of the aged physician, was constantly at the side of the defendant in the courtroom. Although a wheel chair was still being used to transport Dr. Wynekoop from the county jail to the courtroom of Judge Harry E. Miller, Dr. Wynekoop's physical condition was presumably improved.

While her cheeks were pale and her body drooping at the first trial there was a noticeable trace of color in the defendant's face. She showed a livelier interest in the courtroom proceedings.

Earle Wynekoop, husband of the slain Rheta, continued to remain away from the second trial as he had at the first. State's attorney's police refused to say whether they were still seeking him.

Urge Corn-Hog Growers to Sign U. S. Contracts

Corn and hog growers of the state are being urged to sign the government adjustment contracts by the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation as a means of increasing their purchasing power, according to a statement made this week by Murray D. Lincoln, executive secretary, at Columbus.

"It is organized agriculture's plan of securing parity prices for these farm products by reducing supplies to a home market demand, and to provide benefit payments to enhance immediate purchasing power," says Mr. Lincoln. "The Agricultural Adjustment Act was formulated by the nation's farm leaders a year ago and sponsored through Congress, to restore the industry which had reached the lowest parity level in history at that time."

NOT YET AT PEAK

"The beneficial effects of the act have not reached their fullness, and a steady program has proved a distinct stimulus to recovery in areas where it has been carried out," states the official. "If an extensive sign-up of corn and hog growers is secured in Ohio, it will add several million dollars to the purchasing ability of agriculture in the state during the next 12 months. The co-operation of all eligible signers will bring it upwards of 17 million dollars to the corn and hog growers of Ohio."

"Even greater benefits are expected to result from the 20 per cent reduction in corn acreage and the 25 per cent reduction in the number of hogs produced in 1934, bringing production figures down to co-consumer market demands, wherein higher prices to farmers for these products will result in the following year. The farmer who refuses to co-operate is only delaying the time when all farmers will receive parity prices."

AID DAIRY FARMERS

The solution of the dairy problem is outstanding as a matter of farm relief, states C. A. Dyer, state legislative representative of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, this week at headquarters in Columbus.

"There is talk nationally of reducing dairy animals 25 per cent in order to eliminate the surplus of dairy products," he says. "We should also protect the dairy industry from the competition of vegetable fats coming in from Oriental countries."

"Our foreign market for lard and other animal fats has been practically destroyed, but we would have use for them here at home, if there was protection against the importation of foreign vegetable fats."

"A bill is pending before Congress to place a tariff on imported vegetable fats. It has been reported out favorably by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives. Every dairyman in Ohio should write his Congressman and Senators Fess and Bulkley, insisting that they support this legislation."

Armor Plate Dates to 1855

The history of armor plate goes back to 1855 when the French first used metal to protect the sides of their ships of war. The first plate was made of cast iron, but this gave way later to a plate made of iron with steel poured over the surface. This, in time, also gave way to case-hardened steel; that is, steel with a greater percentage of carbon near the surface and to steel alloyed with nickel. The plate at one time was as much as 22 inches thick, but modern methods of treating the steel have made such extreme thickness unnecessary.—Washington Star.

The First President's Birthday

To celebrate Washington's birthday an afternoon of bridge will be indulged in by many folks. Parties, dancing and more bridge will be amusing for the evening hours. Patriotism will be evident in the show of the national colors in decorations, table service and food.

Did you say, "Who is going to have blue food?" The snappy answer to that question may be, "What's the difference?" There are plenty of ways to avoid worrying about it, and a table set with blue glass goblets, or a cloth with blue checks or stripes would serve the purpose, and be modernistic as well as appropriate for the season. However, there are harmless vegetable colorings made, nowadays, that can be used freely, but artistically please, to violate the most rigid natural laws regarding the color of things.

Menu for a Washington's Birthday

- Cherry Cluster Salad
 - Chopped Olive, Minced Celery and Mayonnaise Sandwiches
 - Ice Cream Molds
 - Washington Mounds
 - Coffee
- The Cherry Cluster is an especially attractive salad, and the old story of the cherry tree connects the cherry with the celebration of our hero's birthday. To serve six, these ingredients are required:
- 1/2 C. chopped nuts
 - 1/2 C. mayonnaise
 - 6 lettuce cups
 - 6 halves of canned peaches
 - 1 pk. soft cream cheese
 - 1 can Royal Anne cherries

Combine the nuts and mayonnaise. Arrange cups of lettuce and in each place a spoonful of nuts and dressing. Drain the juice from the peach halves, drying thoroughly with a soft linen towel. Cream the cheese and spread the rounding side of the peaches. Cover the cheese completely, using the cherries that have been cut in halves and stoned. The effect is that of a cluster of cherries. Place the peaches over the mayonnaise on the leaf of lettuce to produce a most appropriate as well as delightful party salad.

The sandwiches are cleverly cut with a hatchet-shaped cutter and harmonize with the idea of the cherry salad.

Washington Mounds are related more nearly to the macaroon than to any other kind of edible, in case you were wondering what they are. Here is the recipe, and the Mounds can be used the year 'round if you like them:

- Washington Mounds
- 1/4 C. sugar
- 1 egg white
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1 C. rice flakes
- 1/2 C. chopped nuts
- 1/2 C. chopped candied cherries
- 1/4 C. shredded coconut
- 1/4 tsp. almond extract

Beat the egg white and salt until very stiff. Add sugar, gradually beating it in with the beater. Fold in the rice flakes mixed with the nuts, cherries and coconut, then add the almond extract. Drop by tablespoonfuls on a well greased cookie sheet and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) for 10 minutes, or until firm.

A hot dish could be added to this menu, if you choose to have a dinner bridge, or a more substantial menu, and Ham and Olives with Mushroom Sauce is a colorful suggestion.

- Ham and Olives with Mushroom Sauce
- 2 Tbsp. butter
- 3 Tbsp. flour
- 2 C. milk
- 1/2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- Dash of pepper
- 1/2 C. diced, cold, cooked ham
- 2 Tbsp. stuffed olives, chopped
- 1 loaf dry bread for toast cases

Melt butter in a saucepan, add flour and stir together until well blended. Add milk and seasonings and cook until thick. Add ham and olives and heat thoroughly.

AIR MAIL

up to the weather.

At Newark airport the scheduled first flight of the day, a 5:30 a. m. departure for Chicago with the airmail collected overnight in New York, was called off "indefinitely" by Major B. O. Jones, commanding officer.

A large United Air liner from Cleveland landed safely at the field at 7:30 a. m. and stalled in a snowbank. It was not carrying mail.

SURVEY STARTED

At Bolling field in Washington, Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover in charge of the eastern air mail zone took off in the only ship to leave. He planned a "cross country" flight for weather details.

At Boston the blizzard grounded all planes covering the airport with several inches of snow.

The storm over the Alleghenies stopped air mail service east of Pittsburgh. Mail arriving from Chicago was continued east by train.

The middle west reported good flying weather and extreme cold but the Rockies were shrouded in fog and snow.

The first army plane on the San Francisco-Salt Lake City route was grounded at Sacramento, Cal., by "bad weather over the Sierras."

The first army plane to take mail from Salt Lake City for Los Angeles grounded at Milford, Utah. The dispatch of mail from Los Angeles East via Salt Lake City last night was sent by train because of the weather.

Despite the weather, however, the Western Air express transport left Los Angeles on schedule last night carrying the last load of mail allowed it. It planned to drop the mail at Las Vegas, Nev., and continue without it as it would be illegal to carry it after midnight.

Two army flyers enroute from their Riverside, Cal., base to their mail assignments at Los Angeles and San Francisco were forced down yesterday by the weather.

TRAIN USED

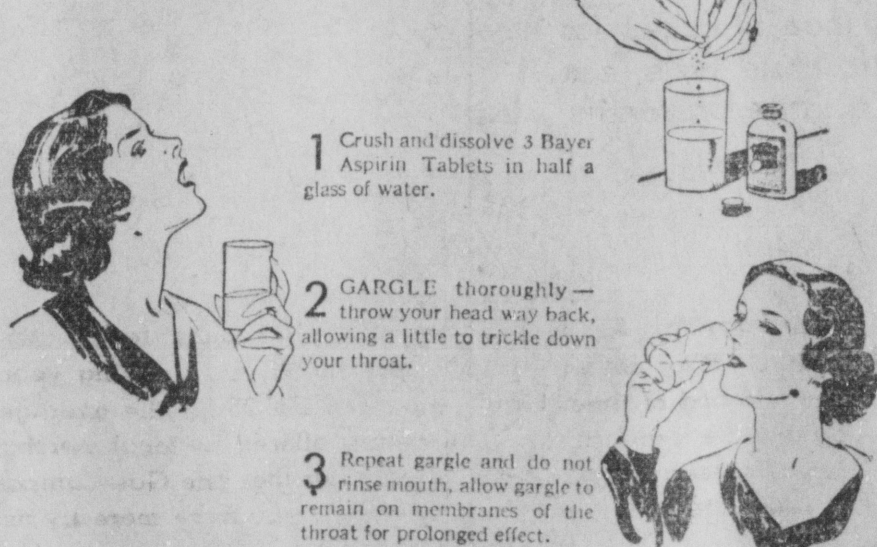

The army plane starting the mail on the Dallas, Texas, Cleveland, Ohio, route last night lacked space for all the mail. Some had to be sent by train.

SYNOPSIS

Young and lovely Patricia Warren employs the card skill she inherited from her late father to help support her stepmother and step-sisters by playing at bridge parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Eileen Sycott. Pat receives fifty cents an hour. She declines the offer of Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, to make her his secretary and partner when, after taking her home, he tries to make love to her. Her nagging stepmother is furious at Pat's refusal. Later, at Mrs. Sycott's home, Patricia meets Clark Tracy, her ideal, only to learn he is engaged to the socially prominent Marthe March. Pat is heartbroken. New Year's Eve, Bill McGee, a small-time politician and thug, insists that Pat accompany him to a dance. They stop at a rival racketeer's place where Bill demands settlement for infringement on his territory. He is shot and Pat flees in terror. Arriving home, Pat is put out by her stepmother who says the police are looking for her. Leda Frayne, a friend, offers Pat a home with her. After searching for work in vain, Pat enters a professional bridge game at the Hotel Beaucarne and wins $35. Jubilant, she returns to Leda. Phil Kennedy, Leda's fiancé, quarrels with Pat for gambling, and objects to her living with Leda. Pat rents a cheap furnished room. Next day, she returns to the hotel for another game. Later, disgusted with gambling for a livelihood, Pat tries to return home, but her stepmother will not allow her to stay. She tells Pat, Patrolman Mallory wants to see her so Pat goes to the police station.

CHAPTER TEN

It seemed like a long wait before she saw the Irishman's familiar bulky figure swing through the door. She had known Mallory ever since she could remember, the grizzled, middle-aged policeman had walked up and down her block for twenty years; he was a part of her childhood. She smiled and experienced an inward shock when, for the first time in her life, she received no answering smile. Mallory approached, dropped heavily to the bench beside her. She had never seen him look so stern, so strange. "I'm ashamed of you, Patricia," he began and there was disappointment in his face.

"Why I—," she stammered. "You're headed for trouble, my girl," he broke in sharply, impatient of interruption. "I thought I knew you; thought I knew something about human nature. I guess I don't. I never dreamed you were the kind who'd get mixed up with a two-for-a-penny thug like Bill McGee."

"Let me tell you about it, please." "You needn't try to pull the wool over my eyes, Patricia. I know you've left a good home; I know you're playing around with that gang of cheap gamblers that hang out at the Hotel Beaucarne."

Patricia had wanted to explain. She had wanted to try to make him understand. Now suddenly she did not. Her lips that had trembled straightened.

She said defiantly, hostilely, "Did you ask me to come here just for a lecture?"

"No," replied the man, "I didn't." His tone was cold and distant. He bent forward and said, "What you do is no concern of mine or of the force until you break the law. I can see my advice as a friend means nothing to you. But I'm telling you this—McGee gets out of the hospital next week and if I were you I'd stay out of his way."

"Why?" faltered Patricia. "He's sore at you for running out on him New Year's Eve. That's one of the handicaps of training with gangsters, Patricia. If they happen to get shot up accidentally they expect their women to stick to them."

till the ambulance comes anyhow." "Bill McGee is nothing to me," cried the girl. "He knows that; he knew it then."

"That's as may be. My information is that he's got it in for you. It might be only some more of Bill's hot air; then again it might not be."

Patricia was shaken. The gravity of the man's tone was unmistakable. He thought this important or he wouldn't have bothered to report it. He didn't believe it was only some more of Bill McGee's hot air. It wasn't right, it wasn't fair that she should have this to contend with along with all the rest.

She struggled against a rush of helpless tears. In her shabby little frock she looked so frightened, so defenseless, so pathetically young that momentarily Mallory softened.

He said almost gently, "Go home, Patricia. That's the best place for you. We can protect you there."

"No," she said stiffly, "no, I can't go home."

His sympathy was exhausted. He rose with the air of one washing his hands of the matter. "It's your own life," he conceded politely. Just as politely, he added, "If you want a police escort for awhile I can probably arrange one. That is, if a police escort won't interfere too much with your present way of living."

Patricia too rose. Mallory failed to observe the trembling of her ungloved hands. He only observed the coolness and steadiness of her voice as she declined his suggestion. He shrugged.

"Anyhow I've tipped you off. Don't accept any dates with strange men and watch out for fake telephone messages. Bill will probably take his bad temper out in threats but there's always the old chance."

Heavy-hearted, the girl left the police station. She had lost a friend. She had received terrifying information. That was terrifying. She had concealed from Mallory; she could not conceal it from herself. She had wiped Bill McGee from her consciousness; to have him return in this disturbing guise appalled her. What form would his reprisal take? What would he try to do to her?

That night before she went to bed she pushed a heavy bureau in front of her door; the second night she did the same thing. But gradually as day followed day and nothing happened she forgot Bill and Bill's enmity and desire for revenge.

Her whole mind was absorbed in the same problem that occupied thousands of other girls in her situation—a financial problem. Every afternoon she played bridge. She managed to maintain a precarious existence. Usually she won but sometimes the cards were bad and she lost. She suffered then the same moods of depression and black despair that her father had suffered before her. With a margin of capital as small as hers, one really had to be a gambler to win.

gain basements; all her own fault that she lived in a wretched hall bedroom and lunched sparingly at corner drug stores.

Even Leda believed her friend quixotic and foolish. She said as much one afternoon when Patricia, more worried and anxious than usual, stopped by the beauty shop.

"You've got the name why not have the game?" was the way the older girl put it.

"I haven't the name of being a card sharp!"

"Don't fly off the handle so," said Leda placatingly. Joining her elbows on the glass topped table used for manicuring, she continued judicially, "To the average person there isn't a lot of difference between a girl who gambles with good card players and a girl who gambles with bad card players."

"There might be a difference to the girl," Patricia submitted.

"I don't see why. If you're in it to win I don't see why you're not in it to win all you can. Personally the whole thing looks silly to me. If you're going to play bridge for money you might as well play it with Julian Haverholt and get in the really big dough."

"How about my reputation?"

"Gosh, Pat, you're young," sighed the other. "Nobody cares what a girl does with herself so long as her talents don't run to shoplifting."

"Phil cares—about you," Patricia interposed pointedly.

Leda flushed. "That's different," she admitted, as the bright color deepened. "But you can do as you please, Patricia. You're heart whole and fancy free."

"How do you know I am?"

Patricia was sorry the moment she spoke. For instantly Leda's eyes widened incredulously; instantly the other was full of eager interest.

"Why, Pat, you didn't tell me. What an oaf I've been. Where'd you meet him? What's he like? Who is he?"

"I was only fooling," muttered Patricia, furious at the avalanche of questions she had brought down upon herself.

"Don't kid me. You're red as a beet. Is it Wally Edge?"

"Wally Edge?" echoed Patricia scornfully. "I should say not! He's her color as bright as the other girl's had been. But where Leda's expression had been serene and proud, Patricia's was troubled and unhappy. Naturally she was thinking of Clark Tracy. For a moment the memory of that magic hour with him overwhelmed her. What would he think of her now? Nothing, probably. From the very first she had meant nothing to him. Why should he care what became of her? She did not intend that Leda should guess the bitter thoughts that thronged upon her. She evaded the other's eager questions, shaking her head again and again, until at last Leda shrugged and surrendered.

"Have it your own way, Pat. Would you like a manicure?"

"I'd love one."

They were in the middle of the manicure when the telephone rang. It was Wally Edge calling Patricia from the Hotel Beaucarne. He had arranged a game and wanted her help immediately.

"Who are you going to play?" demanded Leda curiously.

"Wally didn't say. He only said it would be a tough battle."

"Well, I hope you win."

"So do I," admitted Patricia ruefully. "I certainly need to win. I've got twenty dollars in the world and rent due tomorrow."

She rushed out to the hotel. Wally was waiting for her in the lobby, seated beside a man and a girl. Patricia stopped at the threshold, feeling frightened, confused.

The second man was Julian Haverholt.

Facts About X-Ray and Its Value

Rated the Greatest of Science's Aids in War on Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

MODERN MEDICAL science has successfully combated many infectious and distasteful diseases of the human body. In former times many of them were considered incurable.

Few people realize that our present knowledge of the cure of disease is due in a large measure to the persistent and untiring efforts of certain great men. Those men who have dedicated their lives to mankind and have striven to benefit the race.

Probably all the discoveries credited to modern science, none has contributed more to the saving of human lives than the X-ray. This great instrument of human kind was presented by Wilhelm Conrad Roentgen. He discovered the X-ray in 1895. Since then, millions of lives have been saved by the diagnostic use made of the X-ray.

First Machine Dangerous
Many of my readers will recall the crude early X-ray pictures reproduced in magazines and newspapers. To the beginning this method was used almost exclusively to photograph bones of humans and to locate foreign bodies like bullets.

The first X-ray machine was a crude one, difficult and dangerous to use. Today, the X-ray has been so perfected that it takes accurate pictures of various parts and organs of the body. Its use helps the physician to study every part of the human anatomy. In consequence he discovers diseases that formerly baffled the medical profession.

The modern physician can actually visualize the internal organs. More than this, he can discover abnormalities before the old-time familiar symptoms appear.

Most persons have the mistaken idea that the X-ray is harmful and that the procedure of its use is a dangerous one. It is a true statement that in the early days, it often proved harmful. In many instances, it led to severe and fatal X-ray burns. This is not true today.

As I have said, the X-ray machine has been so perfected that all possible sources of danger have been eliminated. The X-ray examination causes no discomfort or pain.

"Roentgenology"
The plate or X-ray picture is obtained by placing a sensitive film on one side or portion of the body to be examined. The X-ray current passes through the tissues to the film, leaving a picture of the imprint upon the plate.

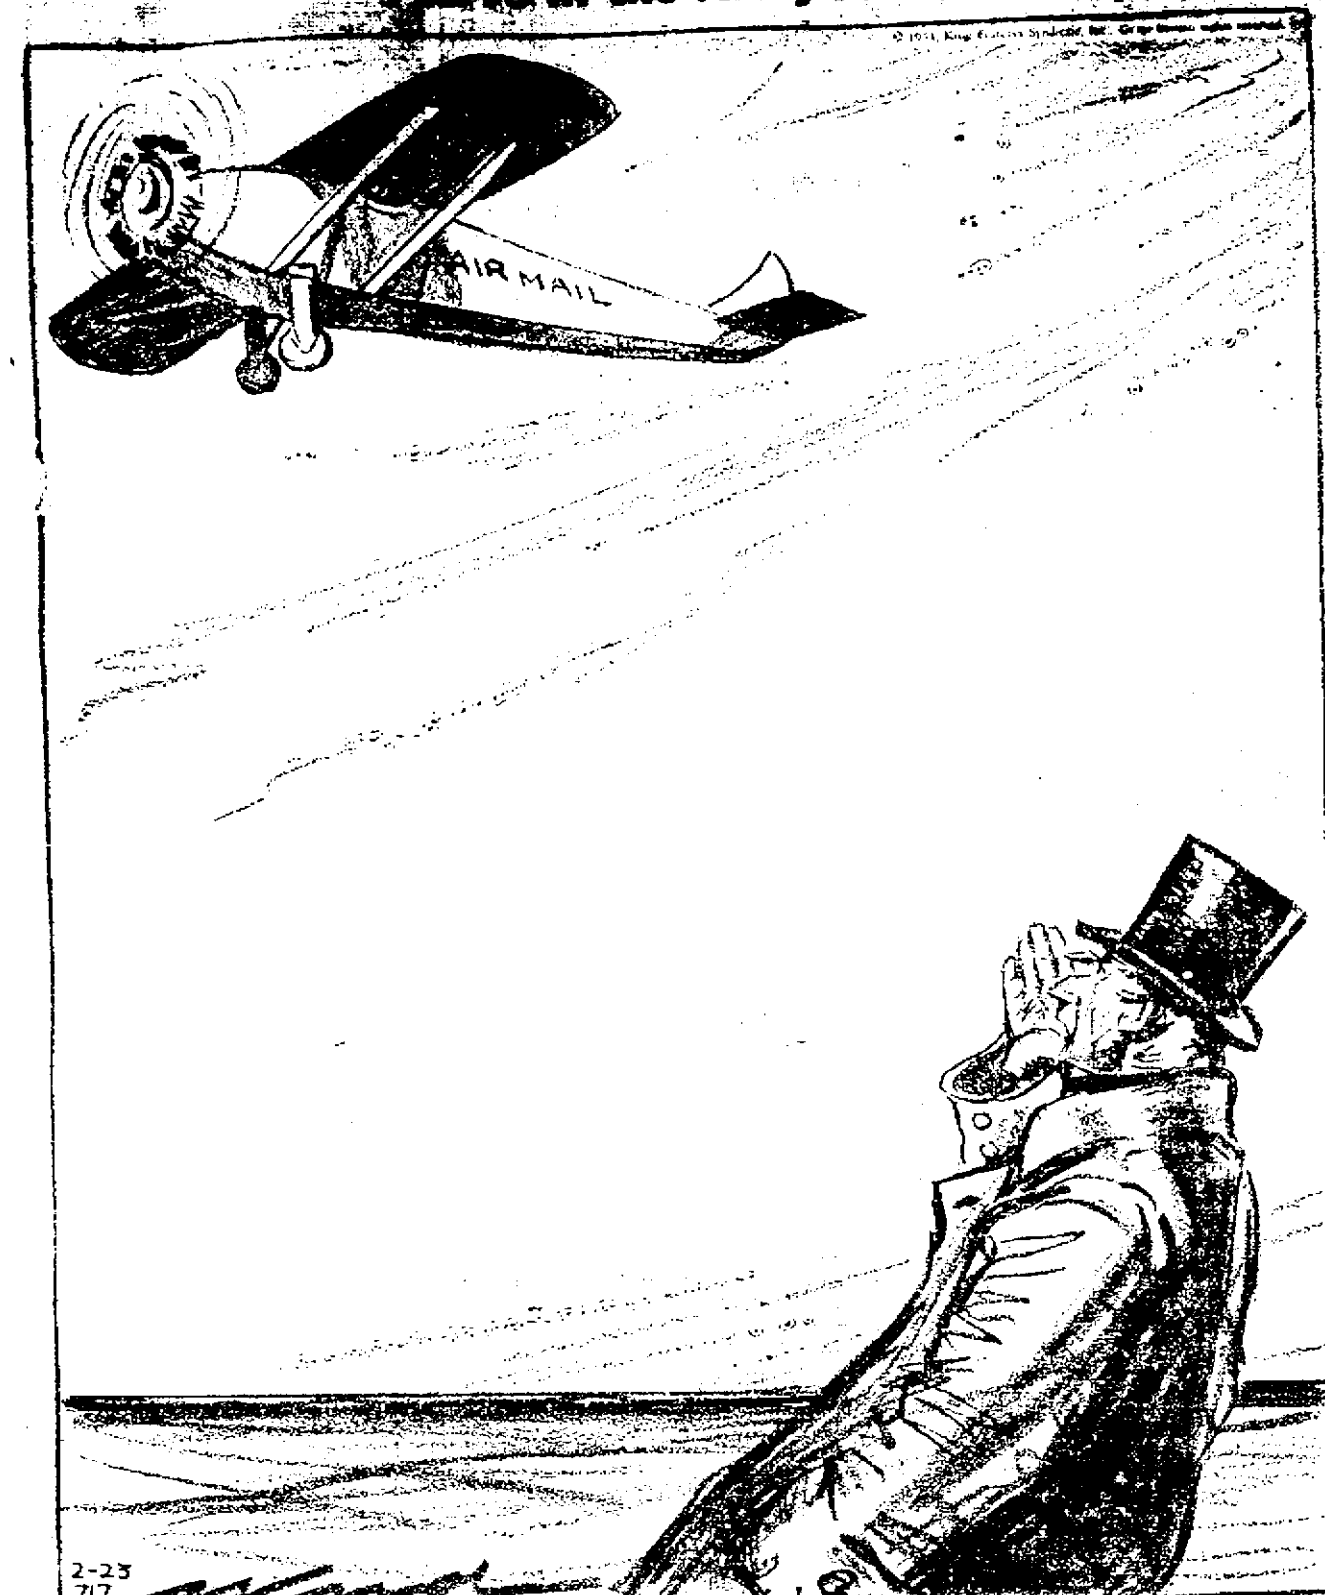

This film is studied carefully and compared with a normal plate of the same part. Of course, the study of X-ray plates is a highly specialized one. It requires special training and instruction. The specialty is called "Roentgenology" in honor of Dr. Roentgen, the father of the X-ray.

It is now possible to X-ray almost every portion of the body. The head, sinuses, teeth, lungs, heart, gall bladder, appendix, intestines, kidneys and bladder, are the most important structures studied. Research is still going on and it is hoped that other vital organs, such as the liver, will eventually be more perfectly pictured.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of a careful X-ray examination. By means of this, the physician is able to detect early cases of tuberculosis, cancer and other disturbances.

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of strong laxatives may do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. All druggists, ready for use, in big bottles. Member N. R. A.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a gentle, safe, and effective laxative. It is made from natural ingredients and is suitable for all ages. It is a liquid form, which is easy to take and does not cause any discomfort or pain.

Molds In Education

It seemed almost inevitable, with mounting criticisms of the educational system and the still more rapidly accumulating theories of how it ought to be remade that sooner or later there would come a cry to 'stop educating our children.'

The sooner all realize that education—that is, an organized system for arranging a child's environment according to a certain pre-conceived pattern—will not add to the happiness of the world nor, in most cases, of the child, the better for all.

Education is merely another expression of intellectual life—like philosophical argument or the writing of plays—but the public insists on regarding it with all the solemnity of an institution and being outrageously disappointed when it does not produce all the perfect results which it demands that institutions should and that, incidentally, none of them ever do.

The effects of institutionalism on college athletics have been gravely debated, but the danger of a similar institutionalism in college classrooms seems to have been overlooked.

Amateurism is demanded of scholastic and collegiate athletics, but the public seems incapable of that attitude toward education. It demands that education bring results—spiritually or politically or in addition to human happiness. On this score people show marked inconsistency. If the college graduate spurns the overalls, education did him no good.

No one has yet invented that which will remake the world. Not even the modern educational system is such an invention. But that system would come nearer remaking the world if institutions of higher learning were content with being sources of ideas for seeking after ideas. Education is the opposite of shaping all minds to fit one mold.

According to a judge, boys may tease dogs. And dogs may bite boys, too.

The Search for Oil

WITH oil, the world's present problem is not finding ways and means to get along with an inadequate supply. That is a problem for the distant future. The task at hand is one having to do with elimination of waste, prevention of over-production, and conservation of the untapped reservoirs.

For many years men have tumbled over one another in their haste to discover, and to drain, the world's oil reservoirs. It mattered not whether there was immediate demand for the output. When production exceeded consumption huge tanks were built in which surplus petroleum could be stored and the cost of building and maintaining these artificial reservoirs was added to the cost of oil.

Lately a new policy has been gaining ground. Why not permit the oil to remain underground secure in its natural reservoirs until such time as demand makes necessary its removal?

Though drilling and pumping should not be extended until consumption catches up with production, the world-wide search for new oil-bearing lands should not stop. That the search will go on is evidenced by the application of oil operators for their research and exploration.

Despite the fact that the supply of oil seems to be inexhaustible, there is constant need for the discovery of new sources of supply, and if the radio is essential to the work of locating and charting those sources the request of the operators should be granted at least in part.

KNAVE'S GIRL By JOAN CLAYTON

SYNOPSIS

Young and lovely Patricia Warren employs the card skill she inherited from her late father to help support her stepmother and step-sisters by playing at bridge parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Eileen Sycott. Pat receives fifty cents an hour. She declines the offer of Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, to make her his secretary and partner when, after taking her home, he tries to make love to her. Her nagging stepmother is furious at Pat's refusal. Later, at Mrs. Sycott's home, Patricia meets Clark Tracy, her ideal, only to learn he is engaged to the socially prominent Marthe March. Pat is heartbroken. New Year's Eve, Bill McGee, a small-time politician and thug, insists that Pat accompany him to a dance. They stop at a rival racketeer's place where Bill demands settlement for infringement on his territory. He is shot and Pat flees in terror. Arriving home, Pat is put out by her stepmother who says the police are looking for her. Leda Frayne, a friend, offers Pat a home with her. After searching for work in vain, Pat enters a professional bridge game at the Hotel Beaucarne and wins $35. Jubilant, she returns to Leda. Phil Kennedy, Leda's fiancé, quarrels with Pat for gambling, and objects to her living with Leda. Pat rents a cheap furnished room. Next day, she returns to the hotel for another game. Later, disgusted with gambling for a livelihood, Pat tries to return home, but her stepmother will not allow her to stay. She tells Pat, Patrolman Mallory wants to see her so Pat goes to the police station.

CHAPTER TEN

It seemed like a long wait before she saw the Irishman's familiar bulky figure swing through the door. She had known Mallory ever since she could remember; he grizzled, middle-aged policeman had walked up and down her block for twenty years; he was a part of her childhood. She smiled and experienced an inward shock when, for the first time in her life, she received no answering smile. Mallory approached, dropped heavily to the bench beside her. She had never seen him look so stern, so strange.

"I'm ashamed of you, Patricia," he began and there was disappointment in his face. "Why?" she stammered. "You're hoked for trouble, my girl," he boomed in sharply, impatient of interruption. "I thought I knew you; thought I knew something about human nature. I guess I don't. I never dreamed you were the kind who'd get mixed up with a two-for-a-penny thug like Bill McGee."

"Let me tell you about it, please," she said. "You needn't try to pull the wool over my eyes, Patricia. I know you've left a good home; I know you're playing around with that gang of cheap gamblers that hang out at the Hotel Beaucarne."

Patricia had wanted to explain. She had wanted to try to make him understand. Now suddenly she did not. Her lips that had trembled straightened.

She said defiantly, hostilely, "Did you ask me to come here just for a lecture?"

"No," replied the man, "I didn't." His tone was cold and distant. He bent forward and said, "What you do is no concern of mine or of the force until you break the law. I can see my advice as a friend means nothing to you. But I'm telling you this—McGee gets out of the hospital next week and if I were you I'd stay out of his way."

"Why?" faltered Patricia. "He's sore at you for running out on him New Year's Eve. That's one of the handicaps of training with gangsters, Patricia. If they happen to get shot up accidentally they expect their women to stick to them."

till the ambulance comes anyhow." "Bill McGee is nothing to me," cried the girl. "He knows that; he knew it then."

"That's as may be. My information is that he's got it in for you. It might be only some more of Bill's hot air; then again it might not be."

Patricia was shaken. The gravity of the man's tone was unmistakable. He thought this important or he wouldn't have bothered to report it. He didn't believe it was only some more of Bill McGee's hot air. It wasn't right, it wasn't fair that she should have this to contend with along with all the rest. She struggled against a rush of helpless tears. In her shabby little frock she looked so frightened, so defenseless, so pathetically young that momentarily Mallory softened.

He said almost gently, "Go home, Patricia. That's the best place for you. We can protect you there."

"No," she said stiffly, "no, I can't go home."

His sympathy was exhausted. He rose with the air of one washing his hands of the matter. "It's your own life," he conceded politely. Just as politely, he added, "If you want a police escort for awhile I can probably arrange one. That is, if a police escort won't interfere too much with your present way of living."

Patricia too rose. Mallory failed to observe the trembling of her ungloved hands. He only observed the coolness and steadiness of her voice as she declined his suggestion. He shrugged.

"Anyhow I've tipped you off. Don't accept any dates with strange men and watch out for fake telephone messages. Bill will probably take his bad temper out in threats but there's always the off chance."

Heavy-hearted, the girl left the police station. She had lost a friend. She had received terrifying information. That it was terrifying she had concealed from Mallory; she could not conceal it from herself. She had wiped Bill McGee from her consciousness; to have him return in this disturbing guise appalled her. What form would his reprisal take? What would he try to do to her?

That night before she went to bed she pushed a heavy bureau in front of her door; the second night she did the same thing. But gradually as day followed day and nothing happened she forgot Bill and Bill's enmity and desire for revenge.

Her whole mind was absorbed in the same problem that occupied thousands of other girls in her situation—a financial problem. Every afternoon she played bridge. She managed to maintain a precarious existence. Usually she won but sometimes the cards were bad and she lost. She suffered then the same moods of depression and black despair that her father had suffered before her. With a margin of capital as small as hers, one really bad afternoon would wipe her out. If that happened, if she lost her last cent at the card tables, what then would become of her? She thought of that at nights.

If she had been less scrupulous, if she had been willing to accept the advice that Wally Edge proffered more and more freely, everything would have been different. She could have cleaned up hundreds of dollars by playing against the dubs who innocently dropped into the Hotel Beaucarne looking for an afternoon of cards. Others did!

It was not necessary to cheat. It was only necessary to lie in wait for opponents so stupid, so unwary that they were bound to lose no matter how the cards ran. Somehow Patricia would not do that. She preferred to take her chances matched against the wolves themselves. It was all her own fault that her wardrobe consisted of two cheap little dresses bought in bargain basements; all her own fault that she lived in a wretched hall bedroom and lunched sparingly at corner drug stores.

Even Leda believed her friend quixotic and foolish. She said as much one afternoon when Patricia, more worried and anxious than usual, stopped by the beauty shop.

"You've got the name why not have the game?" was the way the older girl put it.

"I haven't the name of being a card sharp!"

"Don't fly off the handle so," said Leda placatingly. Joining her elbows on the glass topped table used for manicuring, she continued judicially, "To the average person there isn't a lot of difference between a girl who gambles with good card players and a girl who gambles with bad card players."

"There might be a difference to the girl," Patricia submitted.

"I don't see why. If you're in it to win I don't see why you're not in it to win all you can. Personally the whole thing looks silly to me. If you're going to play bridge for money you might as well play it with Julian Haverholt and get in the really big dough."

"How about my reputation?"

"Gosh, Pat, you're young," sighed the other. "Nobody cares what a girl does with herself so long as her talents don't run to shoplifting."

"Phil cares—about you," Patricia interposed pointedly.

Leda flushed. "That's different," she admitted, as the bright color deepened. "But you can do as you please, Patricia. You're heart whole and fancy free."

"How do you know I am?"

Patricia was sorry the moment she spoke. For instantly Leda's eyes widened incredulously; instantly the other was full of eager interest.

"Why, Pat, you didn't tell me. What an oaf I've been. Where'd you meet him? What's he like? Who is he?"

"I was only fooling," muttered Patricia, furious at the avalanche of questions she had brought down upon herself.

"Don't kid me. You're red as a beet. Is it Wally Edge?"

"Wally Edge?" echoed Patricia scornfully. "I should say not! If her color was as bright as the other girl's had been. But where Leda's expression had been serene and proud, Patricia's was troubled and unhappy. Naturally she was thinking of Clark Tracy. For a moment the memory of that magic hour with him overwhelmed her. What would he think of her now? Nothing, probably. From the very first she had meant nothing to him. Why should he care what became of her? She did not intend that Leda should guess the bitter thoughts that thronged upon her. She evaded the other's eager questions, shaking her head again and again, until at last Leda shrugged and surrendered.

"Have it your own way, Pat. Would you like a manicure?"

"I'd love one."

They were in the middle of the manicure when the telephone rang. It was Wally Edge calling Patricia from the Hotel Beaucarne. He had arranged a game and wanted her help immediately.

"Who are you going to play?" demanded Leda curiously.

"Wally didn't say. He only said it would be a tough battle."

"Well, I hope you win."

"So do I," admitted Patricia ruefully. "I certainly need to win. I've got twenty dollars in the world and rent due tomorrow."

She rushed on to the hotel. Wally was waiting for her in the lobby, seated beside a man and a girl. Patricia stopped at the threshold, feeling frightened, confused.

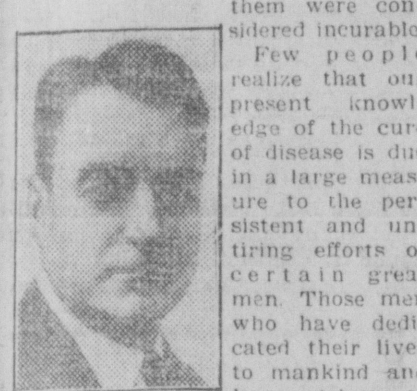

The second man was Julian Haverholt.

IMMIGRANTS FROM GOD

Upon the stage of human life Come myriad ones each day, To play their part in joy or strife And try their lines to say; Upon a foreign stage they walk, Out from another sphere; A foreign dialect they talk; With pride their words we hear.

They are the Immigrants so fair Who come from God above; An answer to our daily prayer, They bind our hearts in love; So fresh and pure from God they come,— These Babes with Heaven's touch, And nothing e'er can keep us from These Babes we love so much.

PATTERN 9668

Soft lines, planned carefully to give slenderness of appearance—that is an achievement in the designing of dresses for the heavier woman. And here is the pattern that does the clever trick. It can be made up in one of the fresh new prints, preferably with a small-figure design in it. Or it can be made of plain silk in any of the new spring shades. The jabot finish at the yoke-line is particularly good, covering a full bust and lending interest to the dress in an unobtrusive way.

Pattern 9668 may be ordered only in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards of 36-inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

ORDER YOUR COPY OF THE NEW MARIAN MARTIN SPRING PATTERN BOOK—a practical Spring sewing guide, offering stunning models for all occasions for grown-ups, juniors and youngsters, and for the woman who needs slenderizing lines. The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Capitol Hill Laughs at Street's Campaign Against Control Bill

WASHINGTON — For gross stupidity, Wall Street's frenzied campaign against the stock market control bill surpasses anything Washington has witnessed in years.

If you took seriously the shudder-and-horror act of the easy-money boys, you would never realize that the country is a gone through four years of bank and stock exchange scandals.

That millions of investors have been impoverished as a result.

That 1931 — a Congressional election year — finds no class in greater popular distaste than the broker and banker.

To Wall Street, apparently, these facts have no bearing on the legislative situation. All the traditional burblings are being exploited.

On the day Roosevelt reiterated his determination to enact stock exchange control legislation, the Wall Streeters trotted out a tale that the President had "dissolved" such a plan.

Simultaneous announcement came from Wall Street that a "group of influential brokers" was planning to call on the President to postpone action until next session.

Then the Stock Exchange announced a list of new reform rules. This drew a big laugh on Capitol Hill.

"Hub," snorted blunt-spoken Senator Fletcher, chairman of the Senate banking committee, "those rules don't mean anything. They can adopt them today, and repeal them tomorrow."

Woodring and the Generals

The drive to oust Harry Woodring as Assistant War Secretary is becoming more intense. Spearhead of the drive is the general staff and its chief general, Douglas MacArthur. General staff officers have laid down almost an ultimatum that Harry Woodring goes out. There is no accusation of graft or dishonesty. But a charge that he was too genial with some of his lobbying friends from Kansas. Also he has been so indiscreet as to shout from the house-tops that the present recovery agencies are

Merry-Go-Round

The Theater Guild lost its nerve when it came opening the Scottsboro play "They Shall Not Die" in Washington. Elaborate plans had been made to invite the Cabinet and the Supreme Court. In fact, Justice Stone already had sent his secretary to the box office to get tickets — when suddenly the opening was called off exactly what the Army wants for the mobilization of industry in wartime. So the high officers are sore. So also is Secretary Dern. But Woodring is fighting back tooth and nail. Apparently the last thing he wants to do is go back to Kansas, but it looks very much as if that is where he is going.

Scene in court at Littleton, Colo., as Donald K. Smith faces bar of justice on charge of beating his 3-year-old son to death because the child persisted in saying "breakfast" when the father ordered him to say "supper." At left, defendant's sister, Mrs. Kristie Dodds, and at right, his father, Milhard Smith, who is standing by him.

Suspect

If Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr., doesn't watch his step in the Treasury, he is soon going to be the subject of a decidedly bitter attack by Senate Progressives.

They resented deeply his ouster of Professor Harold N. Groves, Wisconsin Progressive and a brilliant adviser on taxation. Morgenthau's attempt to install Earle Balle, Wall Street banker and former bond promoter, as his financial adviser in the Treasury, they thwarted by threat of attack.

Now Henry has just made another appointment that has revived suspicion. E. B. Prettynan, General Counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau, rated by the Progressives as one of the most courageous and competent men in the Treasury service, was without explanation removed by Morgenthau. In his place he nominated Robert Jackson, a 42-year-old Jamestown, New York, lawyer.

Senator Coughlin and other Progressives say bluntly they don't like the look of Treasury matters. Too much mystery. They are determined to find out what it is all about — even if they have to speak out about Mr. Morgenthau on the Senate floor.

Salt Is Essential

Salt in some form is absolutely essential to human life. It is possible to live without actually using salt in food but in such cases it is necessary to eat a large amount of food rich in mineral elements. Primitive peoples secured their salt from either "salt licks" of animals or sent expeditions to the sea and salt springs.

Will War Come?

"All these decades, it is true, Pan-American was only a movement. Now that movement is embodied in the German state. And the whole movement, as the German state today, is based on the concept that the Germans are a Herrenvolk, — a race of rulers. It is a serious matter if sixty five million people are led in that direction."

An ironic gleam came in the president's eyes. Then his voice grew harder.

ALL INHABITED

"They say France rules Europe now, — but we shall rule Europe. They speak of needing land, of needing territory. But what does that mean? Is there any land, any territory in Europe that is not already inhabited? They speak of pushing toward the east? But what does that mean? Poland and Russia? They speak of colonies? But what does that mean? Africa? And if so, what does it mean to the states that have their colonies there?"

"You see, the Germans are a serious problem for the whole of Europe. But there is nothing we can do better than to watch and study it. You should see my library on Hitlerism. And in studying the German revolution one must not be led astray by the phenomena that accompany its violent days. In every revolution people get excited and senseless actions are performed. Were there not plenty of such actions in the French revolution, in the American revolution? The Hitler revolution is a genuinely great revolution."

"But now," the president sighed, "When one looks the matter over, one can take some consolation from one thing: Hitler has twice proclaimed that he gives up Alsace-Lorraine. Is he to be believed? Well, he has proclaimed it twice! So what remains for him to quarrel about with France? The Saar? It can be settled of course. — The Treaty of Versailles! I am not one who believes that treaties are made to be broken."

DID IT BEFORE

"It is true that the Germans once went through Belgium and made a scrap of paper of the treaty guaranteeing neutrality."

"RICHER THAN NOW"

"But was Europe then, so rich in 1914?"

"Much richer than now, of course. Look at the value of money, how it has declined. Look at your own dollar."

"Yes," he said, "I know that some people are bellicose, but they're no money, and that's a strong argument against war."

The president's argument seemed to be like a hope that an opinion, the real hope of Czechoslovakia lies in her treaties, lies in her firm belief that the problems raised by Hitler are problems for all of Europe, and that neither France nor England can afford to let the little states go under. The president realized this.

"We are doing our best," he ended, "to bring all the friends of peace together. We must be prepared; not only our army. We are prepared in our convictions, and that is the most important thing. And our conviction is: peace!"

(Tomorrow—Foreign Benes of Czechoslovakia offers from his president, believes chances are fifty-fifty of another European war.)

If Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr., doesn't watch his step in the Treasury, he is soon going to be the subject of a decidedly bitter attack by Senate Progressives.

They resented deeply his ouster of Professor Harold N. Groves, Wisconsin Progressive and a brilliant adviser on taxation. Morgenthau's attempt to install Earle Baille, Wall Street banker and foreign bond promoter, as his financial adviser in the Treasury, they thwarted by threat of attack.

Now Henry has just made another appointment that has revived suspicion. E. B. Prentiss, General Counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau, rated by the Progressives as one of the most corrupt and competent men in the Treasury service, was without explanation removed by Morgenthau.

In his place he nominated Robert Jackson, a 42-year-old Jamestown, New York lawyer.

Senator Couzens and other Progressive and bluntly they don't like the look of Treasury matters. Too much mystery. They are determined to find out what it is all about—even if they have to speak out about Mr. Morgenthau on the Senate floor.

Merry-Go-Round

The Theater Guild lost its nerve when it came to opening the Scottsboro play "They Shall Not Die" in Washington. Elaborate plans had been made to invite the Cabinet and the Supreme Court. In fact, Justice Stone already had sent his secretary to the box office to get tickets—when suddenly the opening was called off

Salt Is Essential

Salt in some form is absolutely essential to human life. It is possible to live without actually using salt in food but in such cases it is necessary to eat a large amount of food rich in mineral elements. Primitive peoples secured their salt from either "salt licks" of animals or sent expeditions to the sea and salt springs.

"All these decades, it is true, Pan-American was only a movement. Now that movement is embodied in the German state. And the whole movement, as the German state today, is based on the concept that the Germans are a Herrenvolk—a race of rulers. It is a serious matter if sixty five million people are led in that direction."

An ironic gleam came in the president's eyes. Then his voice grew harder.

ALL INHABITED

"They say France rules Europe now—but we shall rule Europe. They speak of needing land, of needing territory. But what does that mean? Is there any land, any territory in Europe that is not already inhabited? They speak of pushing toward the east? But what does that mean? Poland and Russia? They speak of Colonies? But what does that mean? Africa? and if so, what does it mean to the states that have their colonies there?"

"You see, the Germans are a serious problem for the whole of Europe. But there is nothing we can do better than to watch and study it. You should see my library on Hitlerism. And in studying the German revolution one must not be led astray by the phenomena that accompany its violent days. In every revolution people get excited and senseless actions are performed. Were there not plenty of such actions in the French revolution, in the American revolution? The Hitler revolution is a genuinely great revolution."

"But now," the president sighed. "When one looks the matter over, one can take some consolation from one thing: Hitler has twice proclaimed that he gives up Alsace-Lorraine. Is he to be believed? Well, he has proclaimed it twice! So what remains for him to quarrel about with France? The Saar? It can be settled. Of course, the Treaty of Versailles! I am not one who believes that treaties are made to be broken."

DID IT BEFORE

"It is true that the Germans once went through Belgium and made a scrap of paper of the treaty guaranteeing neutrality."

Ponzi and Other Financial Bubble-Blowers

Alexander Stavisky

Charles Ponzi

Ivar Kreuger

Charles Ponzi, Italian immigrant boy who developed into a "financial genius" and who sat on top of the world until his bubble burst in 1920, bringing a loss of between $8,000,000 and $14,000,000 to trusting investors, came out of State Prison in Boston into a world that has come to regard his operations of a decade ago as petty larceny. Since the Ponzi affair, the names of Ivar Kreuger, Swedish match king, and Alexander Stavisky, whose pawnshop frauds brought France to the brink of revolution, have flashed across the horizon. They juggled with millions where Ponzi was content with hundreds. When Ponzi was on the crest of the wave, he and his pretty wife, Rose, were two of the most popular people in the United States. Now, after completing 14 years in prison, the erstwhile financier is facing deportation.
